What is therapy?

Therapy is talking with a mental health professional about your thoughts, feelings, and issues. You work together to set goals and learn skills that can help you cope, heal and recover.

Therapy can help if you have a mental health problem or concerns with your relationships, job or family. You and your therapist will decide how often and how long you need to meet.

There are many types of therapy.

Choosing your therapy will depend on your issues, needs and preferences.

What types of therapy are available?

Here are the main types of therapy that have proven to be effective.

Type of therapy	How it works
Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT)	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Helps you learn to challenge and change unhelpful thought patterns and behaviours. These new skills can help you better manage your emotions.• Generally, 10 to 24 sessions. Involves homework and practicing skills in between sessions.• Benefits people facing depression, anxiety, phobias (fears) and addiction.
Mindfulness-based Therapy	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Helps you learn new skills to focus on the present in a non-judgmental way. This can help you control your thoughts, rather than be controlled by them.• May be combined with CBT.• Involves homework and practicing new skills in between sessions.• Benefits people facing depression, anxiety and life stress.

Type of therapy	How it works
Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Helps you learn to accept your issues and hardships, and commit to changing your behaviour, no matter what’s going on in your life and how you feel about it. • Uses aspects of CBT and Mindfulness-based Therapy. • Benefits people facing depression, anxiety and life stress.
Dialectical Behaviour Therapy (DBT) ‘Dialectic’ means balancing opposites (like acceptance and change) and seeing how they go together.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Helps you learn new skills to better respond to your emotions, tolerate distress, be mindful of the present and have effective relationships with others. • Generally, 20 or more sessions. • Benefits people with Borderline Personality Disorder, addiction, depression, Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) and eating disorders.
Interpersonal Therapy	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Helps you find better ways to deal with current problems by focusing on your past and present roles (such as being a child, parent, spouse or boss) and interactions with others. • Generally, 12 to 16 sessions. • Benefits people facing depression.
Narrative Therapy	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Helps you create stories (narratives) about yourself and your identity. • This helps you see your problem as something you have, not something that identifies who you are.
Psychodynamic Therapy	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Helps you analyze and resolve current issues and change your behaviour in current relationships, by analyzing and exploring your past earlier experiences and emotions. • Generally, takes a year or more.

Who provides therapy?

Many different mental health professionals provide therapy. Each has different credentials, training and experience.

Therapist	Background
GP Psychotherapist	A general practitioner (GP) or family doctor who can diagnose mental health conditions, prescribe medications and provide psychotherapy.
Psychologist	A professional with a doctoral degree in psychology (such as a PhD) who can provide psychotherapy and psychological testing.
<ul style="list-style-type: none">▪ Social Worker▪ Occupational Therapist▪ Registered Nurse▪ Nurse Practitioner	Professionals with university degrees and additional training and experience in providing therapy.
Psychiatrist	A doctor who specializes in diagnosing and treating mental health conditions. They can prescribe medications, and sometimes provide psychotherapy.

How do I choose a therapist?

Choosing a therapist is an important decision. A strong relationship with your therapist is built on understanding, empathy, compassion and trust. It is one of the most important factors to successful therapy.

1 Find the name of a therapist

You can find a therapist by:

- Asking someone you trust for a recommendation. This could be a family member, friend, coworker or teacher.
- Reviewing the places to find therapy on pages 7 to 10.

- Searching online directories such as:

Green Space www.grnspace.com

- ✓ Get matched with a therapist who uses Greenspace technology to track your progress and update your care providers.

Psychology Today www.psychologytoday.com

- ✓ Search for therapists that match your location, mental health issue, type of therapy, payment method, gender and more.

Ontario Psychotherapy and Counseling Program and Referral Network
<https://referrals.psychotherapyandcounseling.ca>

- ✓ Submit an online request for a referral to an experienced psychotherapist. Lower cost options are available.

2 Call to learn about the therapist

Call the therapist and ask for a brief phone consultation. Ask questions to see if they could be the right therapist for you.

Questions to ask the therapist:

- What are your background and qualifications?
- How long have you been practicing?
- What types of therapy do you provide?
- How have you helped patients with my particular issue in the past?
- What are your fees?
- Can I try out a single session?
- Do you need a referral from my doctor?

3 Evaluate your relationship with the therapist

After 2 or 3 sessions, consider if the therapist is a 'good fit' for you. If it's not a good fit, don't be afraid to consider another therapist.

What does therapy cost? What are the options for payment?

Therapists set their own fees according to their skills, education and experience. A 1-hour session may cost from $60 to $250. This can be expensive, but there are many ways to make therapy affordable.

Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP)	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• OHIP pays for therapy with a medical professional such as a family doctor or psychiatrist.
Lower-cost therapy services	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Some community health centres and agencies offer free or low-cost therapy.• Therapy may be provided by student therapists, recent graduates or associates who are being supervised until they are fully qualified.
Sliding scale	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Some therapists offer a 'sliding scale'. This means the amount you pay depends on your income. If you cannot pay the full cost of therapy, you are charged a reduced fee.
Private health benefits	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• If you have a job or are a student, your employer or school may provide health benefits that cover therapy.• Check your benefit plan to find out what is covered (type of therapist and total amount you can claim each year).
Employee Assistance Programs (EAP)	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Some employers provide EAP services that include free, confidential counselling.• Your employer does not need to know you are using these services and the therapist will not tell them.• Check with Human Resources for information about EAP services. They may specify the type of therapist you can see and the number of sessions.

Bursaries	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • If you are a university student with a mental health problem and qualify for OSAP (Ontario Student Assistance Program), you may be eligible for the Bursary for Students with Disabilities. You can use this grant for psychotherapy. • For more information, check with Student Accessibility Services.
